

Partial Tuition Assistance Program for Students

The University of Poonch Rawalakot employs internal fundraising mechanisms throughout various faculties and departments to assist students in covering either a portion or the entirety of their semester fees. Typically, departmental welfare societies oversee these fundraisers, aiming to support deserving students. Funds are generated through various means, with both students and faculty members willingly contributing to the cause. Subsequently, these funds are allocated to deserving students to enable them to complete their studies by covering tuition fees and living expenses. For this purpose, we have a Student Welfare Society in the Faculty of Basic & Applied Sciences and a FAROOG E ILM moment in the Faculty of Management, Humanities, and Social Sciences, along with other societies in various faculties.

For instance, the "Chinar Vet Care Society" serves as an illustrative welfare organization operating under the Department of Veterinary Clinical Sciences within the Faculty of Veterinary and Animal Sciences. Beyond providing clinical services to farmers, this organization actively engages in fundraising endeavors to support veterinary medicine students facing financial challenges that hinder their ability to pay semester fees.
